About twenty years ago certain localities in Michigan were frightened half to death about small-pox, and several towns had stringent regulations regarding vaccination. In one village in Macomb County the duty of bringing in delinquents was entrusted to a constable named Simmonds. He worked with great energy, and at last he had every body in except an old chap named Williams, who sternly refused to come forward. The constable laid for him, however, brought him a prisoner to the doctor's office, and ordered him to "peel" his arm and make ready. It was then discovered that he had once wrestled with small-pox, and of course vaccination was not necessary. The constable was all broke up for a moment, and Williams was chuckling with satisfaction, when the officer suddenly asked: "Have you had the measles?" "Yes." "Mumps?" "Yes." "Chicken-pox?" "Yes." "Well, I've had a weeks trouble to get hold of you, and I'll be hanged if you are going to beat me this way. You haven't had the cholera, and I know it, and we don't propose to have this town devastated by grim death this summer. Doctor, I'll hold him down, and you vaccinate him for the cholera."

During the wild cat days in the West, a Brooklyn man, who died not long since, was in business in a Michigan town, and formed a close friendship with the cashier of one of the private banks. One evening the cashier admitted that he was laying his plans to rob the bank of all its funds and skip into Canada, and his friend permitted himself to be drawn into the plot. They were to skip together and share alike, and a certain date was mentioned for the affair to come off. The Brooklyn man sold out his store at a great sacrifice and went to Detroit, where the cashier was to join him with the stolen funds. The hour came and the cashier came, but he had no sparkle in his eyes. "Bustle!—bustle! all to blazes!" "Not a cent." "How's that?" "Why, the president skipped out on Sunday night, and the secretary followed on Monday morning, and the whole board of directors disappeared that night. On Tuesday morning there wasn't an infernal dollar bill left to steal!" "There wasn't?" "Not a one. Just think of the meanness of the whole board jumping in and stealing the cashier blind as a bat. Where will human meanness end?"

AN IRISH FOOTMAN, having carried a basket of game from his master to a friend, waited a considerable time for the customary fee, but, finding no present appeared, scratched his head and said, "Sir, if my master should say, 'Paddy, what did the gentleman give you?'—what would your honor have me to tell him?"

"Down with whisky!" screamed the temperance orator; and then he downed about three fingers of it.
